BISHOP WILLIS' WORK IN FAR OFF TONGA ISLES

Primitive Methods of Making Episcopal Visits.
The Bishop Given a Hokopu by the Natives and a Bowl of Kava.

The following interesting letter is made public by Synodman Testa, one of Bishop Willis' lieutenants in the Church Militant of Hawaii:

Dear Sir:—I write this letter to you thinking that you may be interested to know something about my first experience in travelling in the South Sea Islands. After my short stay of two weeks in Nukualofa, the Bishop went to visit Haabai, about ninety miles to the north, and took me with him, two of the native Church members going also. We went by the S. S. Manapou to Lifuka, the principal island of the Haabai group. During our stay there a large number of natives were received into the Anglican Church by the Bishop.

On Sept. 3rd we went to visit an island called Mouga-one, which is about twelve miles west from Lifuka. At nine o'clock in the morning we got on board of a decked sailing boat thirty feet long by twelve feet wide. Eleven natives went with us. When we got outside of the coral reefs, we were in the open ocean, and the wind being directly aft, we made the passage in three and half hours with only the jib. On the way we saw a large shark exercising itself by leaping up into the air. The natives took out their large conches and blew them for all they were worth. This gives a very piercing sound, which one can hear about two miles off, supposed to be a charm to the ferocious monster, as I have learned. On nearing the island, it being low tide, we could not land at the side nearest to us, which had a sand beach. So we had to sail to the back of the island where the coast is formed by low coral cliffs worn into the most fantastic shapes by the action of the waves. Here were several little bays and in one of these, the sea being calm on this side, the boat was brought alongside of rocks on which it was quite easy to land. After half a mile's walk through an avenue of coconut trees, with yam plantations on either side, we got to the village. In a little while dinner was set before us consisting of chickens and yams cooked in Hawaiian style.

About four o'clock in the afternoon, the natives of the whole village, numbering about sixty, came together to meet the Bishop. Each family brought their present with them and laid it down on the grass in front of the house, where the Bishop and the chief of the feast could see it. They then went back to their places and sat down forming a semicircle. There were three cooked pigs, several baskets of yams, bananas, etc. Presently a large kava bowl was placed in the center of the people, six men were appointed by the chief to act in the ceremony. The kava roots having been presented to the Bishop, were handed to the man who had charge of the kava bowl to be pounded to make the drink, when it was ready, the master of the feast calls out the name of the person to whom the infusion was to be given first, second, third, etc. The first bowl was presented to his Lordship. In the olden days they would club the man if he delivered it to the wrong person, and would not give him another chance of doing it again.

During the distribution a man sat in the center and sang. After that the chief ordered the liver of the roasted pig to be presented to the Bishop according to the Tongan custom. But he did not eat it, as the natives may have been expecting that he would. So it was taken away after he had accepted it. The pigs, yams, bananas, etc., were then divided into shares for the different families. This was the end of the ceremony.

At 7:30 in the evening there was a service in which his Lordship received thirty people into the church, and they sang hymns and anthems beautifully in their native tongue.

On Sept. 4th a morning service was held at half-past eight at which the Bishop baptized one infant and received four children into the church. The service was choral, the music being entirely vocal. The next morning we had breakfast quite early, and were at the place where we landed by 7 a. m. But now our embarking was quite a different thing to our disembarking two days before. The rocks on which we had landed were now covered by the high tide, and a swell was running in and breaking on the rocks. By means of a small canoe, the natives got us and all the baggage on board. It required a number of trips, as only one could be taken at a time, one or more of the natives swimming by the side, and steady-ly, the Haapai Lay Reader and Mouga-one choir master being the most active in this work. It took half an hour to get all on board.

As soon as the sails were set the choir master shook hands with the Bishop and then jumped into the water and swam home. We had a good beam wind and made the returned passage in three and half hours, but not without considerable mal-de-mer on the part of your correspondent.

LEASES CANNOT BE CANCELLED
Attorney General Dole yesterday sent an opinion to Land Commissioner Boyd holding that the government cannot cancel leases at will. Mr. Dole says: "Referring to your inquiry, whether you have lawful authority as Commissioner of Public Lands to cancel the leases of the Hamoa Plantation Company, at the request of its agents, C. Brewer & Co., Ltd., I feel compelled to say that I think you have not."

"This government, and the Republic, and the Monarchy, leased tens of thousands of acres of land at rentals which are now far below their annual value. It would be an extraordinary position if the government should claim that it had the right to cancel these leases and repudiate its contracts because, as the years have gone by land values have increased. The same principle applies in this instance, where the rental agreed upon exceeds the present annual value of the land. The office which you hold in trust for the public does not, I think, include the power to cancel, without consideration, a contract plainly for the benefit of the public."

The Infant Mind.
One of the most unique of late publications to come under our notice, is the Baby Roland Booklet, in which the camera instead of the pen is used to record the development of the infant mind.

The result is both interesting and entertaining and reflects great credit on the artist, George Hansen, who is father as well as artist, making his own little one the subject of the studies. George Hansen, landscape architect by profession, prompted by father-love in making these views of baby, has given a suggestion to slow to follow. The pictures were made with no thought of publication, but their merit being promptly recognized by art critics to whose attention they were accidentally brought, they were issued in shape of booklet and have already had a widespread sale. Redwood Getting Scarce.

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 27.—The Southern Pacific is unable to obtain redwood ties, which have heretofore been regarded as the best, relative to withstanding the wear and tear. The ties after being treated by a creosote process will outwear the ordinary tie by six or seven years.

The inability of the company to get the ties desired for its new lines is owing to the scarcity of redwood itself. It has recently become by far too valuable to be used for railroad ties. The prospects are that the price will continue to rise steadily.

Oregon pine is being substituted for the redwood.

FRONT OF BUILDING CRASHES DOWN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The front portion of the nine-story office building under construction for Henry F. Willard, on Fourteenth street, opposite the new Willard hotel, collapsed shortly after 8 o'clock this morning and a large crowd of people passing on their way to business had a miraculous escape from death or injury. The accident was caused by overloading, the two iron column supports for the front of the building being insufficient to sustain the weight of the 800 and 1,000-pound stones which were being piled as a sill coping on the sixth floor. These immense stones and a part of the iron framework fell to the ground, but fortunately the noise of the crash gave sufficient warning to the forty workmen employed and to the passers-by.

Revolutionists Busy.
VIENNA, Sept. 27.—The Neu Freie Presse today publishes a despatch from Salonica announcing that the inhabitants of all the villages in the vilayet of Monastir have risen since Tuesday and that the revolutionists are marching against the Turkish villages. More troops are being sent to suppress the rising, but the situation is regarded as grave.

HERPICIDE TO HAVE THICK, LUXURANT HAIR
is the most longed-for desire of every woman. She knows what a powerful aid to beauty it is, and endeavors to make her own as soft, glossy and thick as possible. Comparatively few of them are aware as yet that Newbro's Herpicide, a recent scientific discovery, will enable them to possess hair as thick and luxuriant as anyone could desire.
It works on a new theory of destroying the germ that feeds upon the hair root, and thus making dandruff and falling hair impossible. It then proceeds to produce a growth of thick, glossy hair that soon becomes the pride of its owner. One trial will convince you of its virtues.
